

Then the certificate would be issued in one month or at least eight weeks.

Normally, the certificate in those days would be preceded by a birth notification slip issued by the hospital where the birth happened that would go to the municipal authorities for verification.

The person registering the birth would then present it to the registering officer in exchange of the birth certificate.

No such slip was found or proved to have existed. A thorough search at the old registry of the Mombasa Municipal Council did not yield anything. However, this does not remove any possibility that Barack Obama could have been born in Mombasa at the CPGH.

We have also investigated Mama Sarah to find out if she is speaking the truth but she had come out as vague and incongruent.

In one interview with Mama Sarah Obama our officers recorded that Mama Sarah says she cannot remember if she attended the birth of Barack Obama or visited his parents at the Coast Provincial General Hospital around the official birthday of Barack Obama. But she confessed to have had part of her family there at around the same time. Some of her brothers were already working in Mombasa.
